

Better to be poor than more and not rich in God,

Better not to be rich than to dig yourself into a hole;

Better to enjoy the sweet fruit tastes of life,

Better not to look at death as something of a whole.

Better to depend on right and maintain and uphold the law,

Better not kill and destroy and live and to endure;

Better to look for truth and what is good to know,

Better not to lead people to strife but love and learn to grow.

Better to depend on God and trust in his every word,

Better not to get drunk and end up with the mind of a bird;

Better to maintain the dignity and pride that humor brings,

Better not to degrade yourself, to serve the kindest things.

Better to see clearly the light of day to follow the narrow path,

Better not to mean to much but do right with all your heart;

Better to maintain cleanliness and holiness and always have a bath,

Better not to make the things that are not clever or not smart.

Better to manage diligently and show leadership[that's right,

Better not to know too much but love the lord in the light;

Better to have a humble spirit and bless the world of man,

Better not to try to hard but strive for the meekness plan.

Better to be strong vain life for the things that really count,

Better not to die in vain eternally in all the stress and strain;

Better to look to God above who dwells on high in heaven,

Better not to go to hell through sin but in relationship believe.

Signed,

When rain is reign