

Into space on a rocket to live and play,

Going off on a rocket to love I pray;

Up to the stars where space is so high,

Up to the heavens where the atmosphere leaves the sky.

Into space for the feeling of the highest kind of beauty,

The experience of a lifetime to live out my duty;

Where I leave behind the scent and smell of the rose,

To rise up above everything and follow my nose where it goes.

Into space where it takes a lifetime to live in eternity,

Where the earth is down below and has the weight of infinity;

And the thunder and rain with lightning flash and bang,

Love is in the universe with the sun shining through brilliant blue.

Into space where she grants me my every desire,

The children and the future for the treasure to aspire;

So when the time is all done and the air is all fair,

It's gone out of range and you care not danger but dare.

Into space where the organization is at the hands of God,

Far flung out in the distance beyond everything odd;

And the trace of the face is in the twinkling of an eye,

Where I have to look for it and where the good go to die.

Into space to travel far out and beyond anything yet known,

Where the sky sits in paradise with the crown is on the thrown;

And what's tragic is magic in discovering that it is yet to find,

When you are past the point of return and only coming back in mind.
