

To the one who maintains all life and breath,
To the one who gives and sustains us all;
To the one whose love is faith and hope,
These three remain the same above all earth.

I love you God, my heavenly creator,
For you are life and joy and peace;
And you breathe life into us all,
For above the heavens these three remain the same.

Who took on flesh to show his love for us,
Who bought us back to pay for sin;
Who died and rose and comes back again,
These three remain the same from God our friend.

I love you Lord, you redeem the lost,
You are my dearest and strongest brother;
You are the father, son and holy spirit,
These three remain the same you are our lover,

Of good and bad and indifference to God,
You see our hearts, our pain, our shame;
You are the Lord God Father of us all,
You are the eternal three in one the same.

Now to he who reigns and holds the key,
To life and death and perfect peace,
To heaven and hell from where men do dwell,
To live in paradise our home the three the same forever

Signed,

Our God and father.
