

The chalice is the sought after cup of the holy grail,
In which the water of eternal life is to have a drink;
The golden monument of historical Arthur fame,
Is given to Parsifal to be king and reign.

It was a long lost search for the fisher king,
Who held this cup of God, a golden chalice and holy grail;
To be held high and mighty in the king's castle of love,
As a golden treasure, an artefact from heaven above.

Now Parsifal has the power at his own very command,
To reign high and mighty over the medieval village and town;
There is a thousand square miles of land in his kingdom.
Of peace loving countryside's who work to worship the king.

This governing of territory is overwhelming and consuming,
And many a peasant is taken to task for not doing his duty;
It is a beautiful sight to see castle and king,
With The grail chalice held high and mighty over the land and the sea.

Well now as he has the reign and power and throne,
The cup is on a stand at the wish of his every command.
With gems and costly stones imbedded in its side,
To symbolize the Christ who suffered a spear to His side.

The crown is in matching bright and dazzling gems and stones to,
As is the throne well decorated out in gems and stones to match as well.
The sick town folk come to Parsifal in the castle,
To be healed from a drink of this Holy Chalice Cup.

Signed,

All ends up well.
