

Everything's fine for dinner and dance,
She looks in your eyes and she gives you a chance;
You're taken back, but take a deep breath of air,
And you're high on a hill in a heavenly prayer.

Everything's fine for a drive in the car,
You're down at the beach and there's an evening star;
Up in the sky the moonlights coming down,
As the sun hides behind the mountains of a country town.

Everything's fine for love and romance,
You look back at her and she steals your glance;
You ask her a question and don't know the answer,
Or whether a kiss would lead to marriage or disaster.

Everything fine so let God take the reins,
And you'll stay in that place where your heart never pains;
For perfection is a partner that always gets results,
No matter where you're going or whenever time assaults.

Everything's fine when you go on to eternity,
To that road along the river that winds to infinity;
But let not your soul drift up to the heavens so high,
But fill your heart with peace in that bed where you lie.

Now the mind finds an end and everything fine,
You're now at the place at the end on the line;
The lord's given you a relationship that will only progress.
Everything's fine, a last word for the food to digest.

Signed
