

Whether the weather is hot or cold,

Bright and sunny or grey and old;

Whether the weather is raining miserably,

Or white fluffy clouds, floating drifting bye.

.

Whether the weather is fixed or flood;

When the extremes burn down to dirt and mud;

Whether the weather is thunder and lightning,

Or why the seas are rough, wild and frightening.

.

Whether the weather is wet and windy,

Blowing a gale or dampening everything;

Whether the weather is rough and rugged,

On snow capped peaks of blizzard and mountain.

.

Whether the weather is kind or cruel,

Floating on air like it's lost in heaven;

Whether the weather is like flaming hell,

Where we go pay for sin and hope to get well.

.

Whether the weather is real or ideal,

Or written in writing all black and white;

Whether the weather is night or day,

As the world turns constantly and changes each way.

.

Whether the weather is seeking continuous cycles,

Or where on earth it moves in degrees as systems;

Whether the weather is in highs or lows,

It does not matter why it stays or goes.

.

Signed,

Reason for Season.