

Life is a game of love giving us all reason to sing,

So why not let one-another just have every thing;

Don't be disturbed or throw a dampener on others,

But treat every-one as your sisters and brothers.

How much is it worth to lay your life down,

For without one-another we may all as well drown;

Sometimes it seems that God guides our way,

And others it's one-another to give direction on the day.

We should love one-another rejoicing in what may come,

Though this may sound stupid and to others it's dumb;

So never on earth will we be free to have fun,

For without one-another there would be reason for none.

So now we have one-another we can look from the past,

To A future of magic and things that will last;

If one-another should all unite in the end,

This world would have life and in one-another depend.
